TO KNOW

SAM NEWHOUSE, REPORTER

Get out your gaiters! Stock up on salt and shovels! Put on a pot of tea and prepare for the howling arctic winds of winter! Yes, that's right, old Jack Frost is coming to town and he has a few tricks up his sleeve for Philadelphia. The first real winter storm of the season is forecast to hit the region Thursday and Friday, making a mess for commuters, and could dump snow, ice, sleet and freezing rain before it runs its course. Don't say we didn't warn you — read more inside and on [metro Philly.us](http://metro Philly.us).

WELCOME TO METRO PHILLYFLAKE TAKES A STAND ON PROTECTING MUELLER

A lone Republican lawmaker on Wednesday vowed to block judicial nominations in the U.S. Senate until Republican leader Mitch McConnell agrees to hold a vote on a measure to protect a probe into Russia's role in the 2016 presidential election. Sen. Jeff Flake made the threat after McConnell blocked Flake's measure from moving forward. The Special Counsel Independence and Integrity Act would make it harder for President Donald Trump to undermine the investigation into Russian meddling and any coordination between Moscow and the Trump campaign. Moscow denies interfering and Trump has repeatedly dismissed Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation as a political witch hunt. "I will not vote to advance any of the 21 judicial nominees pending in the Judiciary Committee, or vote to confirm the 32 judges awaiting confirmation on the Senate floor until [the bill] is brought to the full Senate," Flake said after his effort to win consent for a vote failed. Flake, who is retiring from the Senate, used the same strategy earlier this year to obtain a Senate vote on an amendment to rein in Trump's power to impose tariffs on foreign goods.

JUSTICE DEPT: WHITAKER APPOINTMENT LAWFUL

The Justice Department on Wednesday defended the legality of President Donald Trump's appointment of Matthew Whitaker as acting attorney general to replace the ousted Jeff Sessions, rejecting the views of critics that the move ran afoul of the U.S. Constitution and federal law. A legal opinion sent to the White House by the department's Office of Legal Counsel concluded that Whitaker's appointment as the chief U.S. law enforcement official was allowed under a 1998 law called the Federal Vacancies Reform Act even though he was not a Senate-confirmed official. Democrats, some legal experts and the state of Maryland — which went to court on Tuesday to challenge the appointment — have said Trump violated the so-called Appointments Clause of the U.S. Constitution because the job of attorney general is a "principal officer" who must be appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate. Whitaker, a Trump loyalist, assumed authority over the ongoing investigation by Special Counsel Robert Mueller into Russia's role in the 2016 U.S. election after the president forced Sessions to resign a week ago.

FIRST LIGHT FESTIVAL HELD AT JARDIN
DES PLANTES IN PARIS

A luminous lantern representing a Thylacine (Tasmanian wolf) is displayed during the exhibition "Espèces en voie d'illumination" at the Jardin des Plantes in Paris on Wednesday. For the first time in its history, the Jardin des Plantes will offer a nocturnal walk in the light of monumental light structures representing animals up to 15 meters tall, to be held from Nov. 16 to Jan. 15, 2019.

TRUMP AIDE FIRED AFTER FEUD WITH MELANIA

Mira Ricardel, the White House deputy national security adviser, was forced out of her job on Wednesday after President Donald Trump's wife, Melania, said Ricardel did not deserve the honor of working for her husband. Ricardel "will continue to support the president as she departs the White House to transition to a new role within the administration," White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders said in a statement. Sanders did not elaborate on what Ricardel's new job would be. Trump, after congressional elections last week in which his Republican Party saw its power eroded, is also preparing to oust Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen as part of a post-election Cabinet shakeup, several U.S. officials said. Ricardel is a former Commerce Department official hand-picked by Trump's national security adviser, John Bolton, to serve as his deputy. She ran afoul of Melania Trump and her staff in negotiations over the first lady's trip to Africa in October and the use of government resources for the trip, a senior administration official said.

First ice and snow of the winter coming to Philly

The region is due for a cold, soaking mix of ice, snow, sleet and rain on Thursday, forecasters say.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

Winter is coming. Forecasters are predicting a heavy downpour beginning Thursday and running through Friday that will range from snow and sleet to freezing rain.

"The first winter storm of the season is likely to impact our area Thursday through Friday," meteorologists with the National Weather Service Mt. Holly station forecast on Wednesday. "Many areas south of I-95 will experience a wintry mix tomorrow morning."

The storm system will range over different parts of the city, cycling through temperatures depending on the activity of pressure systems and in the region, but regardless of the form of precipitation, expect mild to serious delays during your commute Thursday and Friday.

The snow and sleet are forecast to fall all day Thursday, from roughly 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

After 5 p.m. it is expected to turn into 1 to 2 inches of heavy, freezing rain.

"Just to be clear, this will NOT be solely a rain/snow event!" the National Weather Service said. "Sleet and freezing rain are also expected to be in the mix."

Ironically, the first day of winter is pegged at Dec. 21.

But this storm is bringing freezing temps, particularly to neighborhoods further north, above I-95.

Recent cold temps in the 30s and 40s are unusually harsh for mid-November in the Philadelphia region. When the storm comes, it's expected to drop snowflakes across the city — and definitely some slush, at the very least.

Forecasters said temps may marginally increase by the end of the day Thursday, melting whatever snow has fallen across the day. Temps are expected to stay cold on Friday, but more snow is not expected, while the following week is expected to remain cold but relatively dry. In any event, be prepared for the worst.

It remains unclear if the weather will impact the Philadelphia Marathon this weekend, which so far has not yet made any announcements about changes to its schedule.

Cold weather safety tips

This week's storm is not expected to be brutal, but could seriously impact conditions on the roads at the end of the work week before Thanksgiving.

Always remember, when driving in snowy, icy or rainy conditions:

- Leave plenty of stopping distance between fellow cars. You never know when they may need to stop short.
- Make sure your tires are properly inflated and the treads are in good shape.
- If stuck in ice or snow, never spin your tires; it will just get you stuck. Likewise, if your car begins to slide, know how anti-lock brake technology works so you don't lose control of the vehicle or go hydrogliding. Try tapping your brake lightly instead of stamping on it to gradually slow down.
- Be prepared for emergencies. Having an emergency kit in your car with supplies, water, flashlights and other items (up-to-date car insurance) if stopped roadside is always a great idea.

John O'Hurley is returning as the Kennel Club of Philadelphia's National Dog Show.

John O'Hurley gives you a look at the purebred dogs at this year's show

How a tiny Philly-area dog show became the Super Bowl for dog breeders.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

The Kennel Club of Philadelphia (KCP) is not new. Under that name, it has been organized for the sake of purebred pooches since 1879, held their first dog show in 1912, and were elected part of the American Kennel Club in 1913. That all changed in 2002 when NBC broadcast the KCP's annual dog show at the Greater Philadelphia Expo Center in Oaks.

The National Dog Show, as it's formally known, includes 2,000-plus diverse purebred dogs (180-plus breeds) which compete for a single and lucrative "Best in Show" title.

"We give a taste of the purebred dog world in an approachable way," said KCP President Wayne Ferguson. "We reach everyone — children and families joined together for the holidays now make it a part of their annual tradition. We touch the homebound, elderly, the military, and it's apolitical and non-religious, so it's a welcome break for all. We can put smiles on kids' faces, and when I watch people marvel at all the beautiful dogs on site ... It's pretty amazing."

John O'Hurley, a classically trained vocalist and actor, known for his roles as "J. Peterman" on "Seinfeld," and as "Billy Flynn" in "Chicago" on Broadway, is no slouch when it comes to the dog world. Not only has he treasured his own dogs since childhood, O'Hurley has written several best-selling books on the furry topic, including "The Perfect Dog" — which was turned into a successful stage musical whose performance

Thursday night at Norris-town's Centre Theater at 208 DeKalb Street features a special, post-show talk-back performance with O'Hurley at 9 p.m.

"The artistic relationship that I have with dogs is the same as the personal — dogs are there to teach us all that we need to know in life," he says. "Our greatest life lessons are learned from our four-legged friends. I write in that perspective."

"We give a taste of the purebred dog world in an approachable way."

Wayne Ferguson,
KCP President

As for his role with The Kennel Club of Philadelphia and its inaugural National Dog Show in 2002, O'Hurley — who had worked with NBC on "Seinfeld" — said it came together fast and furious.

"Three days, actually," he says. "I had no idea why they wanted me. NBC Sports wanted to schedule something for Thanksgiving Day ... and decided a dog show might be fun."

He added: "The network executives, at first, were not amused but Jon [Miller, the president of programming at NBC Sports], was undeterred, so they licensed the Philly show, as it is the oldest and most respected, re-branded it as 'The National Dog Show,' contacted Purina as the presenting sponsor, then called me. Miller said 'Woof, woof,' so I was their host, and have been so ever since."

And now, he's delighted to have a nearly a dog loving audience of nearly 30 million — people and purebred pooches — hanging on his every word. "It's something of a ratings apocalypse. And the dogs seem to love the attention of the cameras and the crowd. They're the stars. I'm just here for support."

Chesco DA highlights signs of domestic violence after Phoenixville murder

Renewed calls for vigilance of domestic violence after a man from East Pikeland Township allegedly beat his girlfriend to death.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

An East Pikeland Township handyman is charged with murder after allegedly beating and kicking his girlfriend to death, Chester County prosecutors announced Wednesday.

Mark Turner, 53, is accused of murdering his live-in girlfriend, 45-year-old Rachel Yeager, in what police and prosecutors describe as a jealous rage.

"This is the ugly face of domestic violence," Chester County DA Tom Hogan said in a statement. "It is not easy to kill somebody with just your fists and feet. But the defendant was determined to kill the victim."

Turner allegedly confessed to police that he had beaten Yeager when they responded to his home on Ridge Road in East Pikeland Township in Phoenixville, after receiving a 911 call reporting a domestic disturbance on Nov. 1.

"This was a brutal killing.... The defendant does not appear to understand that his girlfriend was not his property."

Tom Hogan,
Chester County DA

Police found Yeager unconscious when they arrived around 11 p.m. She succumbed to her injuries just under a day later at Paoli Hospital, around 8:28 p.m. on Nov. 2.

According to the criminal complaint, Turner confessed to Chester County detectives that he attacked Yeager with his hands and repeatedly kicked her while wearing steel-toed boots because he thought she was cheating on him.

Turner had been drinking after work Nov. 1 at two bars, Prima Bar in Phoenixville and Alex's Tavern in Oaks before returning to the home he shared with Yeager with another quart of beer, according to the criminal complaint.

He told police Yeager was just wearing a bathrobe and a shirt, and that after examining their bed and seeing a wet spot, "he knew" that she had cheated on him. He went downstairs and savagely attacked Yeager, according to the complaint.

An obituary for Yeager said she was born in the U.K. before relocating to the Phoenixville area.

Warning signs of domestic violence

According to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, 1 out of every 4 American women will experience domestic violence in their lifetime, and some 20,000 calls are placed each day to domestic violence hotlines.

People in violent intimate partner relationships may feel trapped due to financial or emotional ties, but domestic abuse can quickly escalate to severe violence or even murder.

To help victims, people are urged to look for the following domestic abuse warning signs:

-Physical marks, bruises or cuts that a victim struggles to explain or justifies.

-Excessive jealous, or possessive, controlling behavior by a partner, where they attempt to control all of the victim's activities and actions.

-Isolation from friends and family, enforced by a partner.

President Donald Trump makes an announcement regarding the "First Step Act" prison reform bill.

GETTY IMAGES

Trump endorses US House prison reform bill

The bill may have a difficult time passing through the Senate.

President Donald Trump endorsed a bipartisan U.S. House bill on Wednesday intended to reform the federal prison system and help inmates prepare for life after their release, but the legislation faces an uncertain future in the Senate.

The First Step Act, co-sponsored by Republican Doug Collins of Georgia and Democrat Hakeem Jeffries of New York, passed overwhelmingly in the House of Representatives in May.

But it has not gained traction in the U.S. Senate because it does not contain a broader overhaul favored by liberal progressives and some moderate conservatives seeking changes to mandatory minimum sentencing laws that have kept many low-level offenders behind bars for decades.

The bill in its current form would have to pass the Senate by year's end before the new Congress is seated in January.

"Today I'm thrilled to announce my support for this bipartisan bill that will make our communities safer and give former inmates a second chance at life after they have served their time," Trump told reporters at the White House.

"I urge lawmakers in both [the] House and Senate to work hard and to act quickly and send a final bill to my desk, and I look very much forward to signing it," he added.

President Donald Trump

The First Step Act directs the federal Bureau of Prisons to assess which inmates should earn credits toward completing their sentences in halfway houses or home confinement.

It also broadens employment opportunities for inmates and expands compassionate release programs for the terminally ill, among other things.

Kevin Ring, the president of FAMM, a group that pushes for criminal justice reform, said the bill "will keep more families together, strengthen communities, and keep crime low."

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Charles Grassley has pushed his own criminal justice reform bill for years that is more comprehensive than the House version because it would also reduce harsh prison sentences for non-violent offenders.

On Thursday, he praised the First Step Act as "an important step in our shared effort to promote safe communities and improve justice ... by ensuring that punishments fit the crimes, we can better balance the scales of justice."

Earlier this year, Grassley was stunned when then-Attorney General Jeff Sessions wrote a letter condemning his legislation as a "grave error" that would reduce prison terms for "a highly dangerous cohort of criminals," leading to a feud between the pair.

Trump forced Sessions to resign last week and replaced him with acting Attorney General Matt Whitaker. REUTERS

Brother of cartel leader testifies against 'El Chapo'

Reynaldo Zambada is expected to continue his testimony on Thursday.

Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman was a top leader of Mexico's Sinaloa cartel along with drug lord Ismael Zambada for years and personally invested in massive cocaine shipments to the United States, Zambada's brother told jurors on Wednesday.

The testimony from Jesus Reynaldo Zambada, 57, came on the second day of Guzman's drug trafficking trial in Brooklyn federal court.

Jesus Zambada, who was extradited to the United States from Mexico in 2012 and is cooperating with U.S. authorities, offered a look at the inner workings of the cartel, which prosecutors say has made billions of dollars selling cocaine, heroin, marijuana and methamphetamine.

Guzman, 61, faces 17 criminal counts, and life in prison if convicted. His lawyer, Jeffrey Lichtman, told jurors in his opening statement that Ismael Zambada was the leader of the cartel, and Guzman a mere scapegoat.

Jesus Zambada, who has a college degree in accounting, testified that he first became involved in the cartel around 1987, when he developed an accounting system for collecting money from cocaine buyers in the United States. He said he remained in the organization until his arrest by Mexican authorities in 2008. By then, he said, the organization was largely run by his brother, who remains at large, and by Guzman.

Zambada said his work included receiving multi-ton shipments of cocaine from Colombia by boat on a beach in Cancun and overseeing a warehouse in Mexico City where cocaine was stored before being smuggled to the United States.

200K

More than 200,000 people have been killed — many in cartel feuds — since the Mexican government sent troops in to take on the drug gangs in 2006.

Speaking calmly and dressed in blue and orange prison clothes, he told jurors that cocaine was transported in gasoline tanker trucks, partly filled with gasoline to avoid detection, to crossing points on the U.S. border.

Zambada also delved into the financing of cross-border drug deals, explaining that the Sinaloa cartel's top and mid-level leaders would pool money to invest in shipments from Colombia. Each investment, split evenly with Colombian suppliers, could yield tens of millions of dollars in profit, he said.

Zambada said his brother and Guzman jointly invested in multi-ton shipments in the 2000s. He offered few other details about Guzman, although he said he had spoken to him on the phone several times. In court, Guzman sat at a table with his lawyers listening to the testimony and showing no emotion.

Zambada is expected to continue testifying on Thursday. He is the first of several former Guzman associates under cooperation agreements who are expected to testify at the trial, which is expected to last up to four months.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Adam Fels told jurors in his opening statement on Tuesday that the evidence in the case would trace the story of Guzman's rise from a low-level marijuana trafficker to a powerful drug lord who became one of the world's most wanted fugitives.

After years on the run and two dramatic prison escapes, Guzman was finally captured in January 2016 in his native Sinaloa in northwest Mexico and was extradited to the United States a year later.

PACKAGE THIEVES

With the holiday season just around the corner, I want to send out this heartfelt plea to all of those out there who think it is okay to steal packages that aren't theirs: Please don't. It seems to happen every year.

I'll have ordered Christmas gifts online for my friends and family to save time and money, only to find they have been lifted by someone before I am able to pick them up from my lobby when I get home from work. Every time the package is stolen, the same thing runs through my mind: How did the person know they would like whatever was inside the box? What if it was just a tightly packed bundle of Nickelback CDs? Congratulations! But for real, what good is stealing a package if you have no idea what it is? It only works if it was gifted to you by someone else — and that's the whole point! So please, don't steal packages that are not yours.

Tell us what you think!

Aries Money, health and legal matters should be your prime concern. A partnership will help you bring about positive changes and a new beginning. Romance will enhance your life.

Taurus Look at what others are doing and consider what's in your best interest. You don't have to give in to the majority. Set your own pace and follow the most suitable path.

Gemini Don't get angry when you can get busy. Your accomplishments will be what separate you from the competition. Dig in and make a name for yourself, everything else will fall into place.

Cancer It's OK to go against the grain. Follow the path that intrigues you and learn something new. Do your own thing and give others the freedom to do so as well.

Leo Expand your interests and circle of friends. Dealing with children or making changes at home or to your workspace will give you a new lease on life.

Virgo Set a budget, a standard and a time limit, and then proceed. Preparation will make the difference when it comes to accomplishing what you set out to do.

Libra Live in the moment and learn all you can. Don't let anyone stifle your plans or stand in your way. Focus on whatever inspires you and work on positive physical change.

Scorpio Focus on fitness, health and personal growth. Being happy with who you are and where you are headed will make a huge difference to the outcome of an emotional matter.

Sagittarius Be open to suggestions and keep conversations amicable. If you overreact or share information that you were supposed to keep secret, you'll end up in an emotional squabble.

Capricorn Putting pressure on someone isn't likely to help. Rethink your approach and consider lending a helping hand. How you handle others will reflect on your leadership potential.

Aquarius You don't have to convince anyone of anything. Make a point to do your own thing and look out for your interests. A physical change will lift your spirits.

Pisces Keep your eye on what's important to you, not on what someone else is doing or saying. Trust in yourself and what you know to be the truth. Don't give in to bad habits. EUGENIA LAST

Steve McQueen on going mainstream and never, ever dumbing things down

The director used The Beatles and "The Godfather" to raise his game with "Widows."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

The power and intelligence of Steve McQueen reverberates throughout all of his films.

Not only does he have the confidence and audacity to take on striking subject matters like hunger strikes ("Hunger"), sex addiction ("Shame") and slavery ("12 Years a Slave"), but he imbues these films and stories with a complexity, intellect and benevolence that leaves them swirling in your mind for weeks and months after.

With "Widows," McQueen has taken these skills to mainstream cinema. But during a recent discussion with Metro regarding the thriller, which revolves around a group of women attempting a heist to pay back a crime boss their criminal husbands died robbing, the English director insisted he wants a larger audience he will never ever dumb down for one.

Instead he wants viewers to be so enthralled by "Widows" that they're also subtly educated, too.

"I wanted to reach a larger, broader audience, definitely," McQueen insists. "The reason I wanted to do that is because I don't think you can have change without reaching the masses. It's impossible."

"Widows" hits the big screen this weekend. MERRICK MORTON / TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX

"Think of the Beatles as an example. Making music, which started with 'She Loves You,' ended up with 'I Am the Walrus' via 'Strawberry Fields.' They brought the general public with them," he adds. "It is important to communicate and put the spotlight on the environment we are living in. Change can only come from the general board of public. Not a niche group. But you need to keep that sort of niche group support while reaching out."

All of this is "very important" to McQueen as an artist.

"Again, with the Beatles, they used just, what, eight or 12 notes, and they reached the world. That's all you want to do as an artist," says

McQueen. "I want to engage but not lower my standards or dumb down. Quite the contrary. You want to raise your game so that you can talk about things that are around us."

"With 'Widows,' I wanted to talk about corruption, religion, politics, race, gender, policing, all of father.' Anyone and everyone can look at that picture and take something from it. From the so called high brow to the so called low brow. Everyone can engage with that film," says McQueen. "The most popular film of 1972 was 'The Godfather.' The most popular film of 1974 was 'Chinatown.' That was it. It wasn't a case of art house and commercial. It was a case of great films."

"That's how I judge any film. I don't care if it is Wong Kar Wai, Michael Mann, Francois Truffaut, Steven Spielberg or the most commercial director working now," he adds. "I just look at it: Is a good film or bad film."

But while other directors would instantly be mocked for using the Beatles and "The Godfather" as comparisons, McQueen has such a prestigious talent that it's easy to envision him using their work to enrich his own. At the same time, McQueen was just as eager to explain how deeply "personal" "Widows" and the plight and gaze put upon its female characters, led by Viola Davis and Michelle Rodriguez, was to him as well.

"Because that was what I was going through in the early '80s as a child. When I saw 'Widows' [the English television show the film is based upon] in 1983, I had that relationship with them," says McQueen. "These women were being deemed incapable, only being judged by their appearance, which was how the gaze was being put on me. I loved their journey and trajectory, and how they turned these stereotypes and ideas on their heads."

"Widows" opens in theaters Nov. 16.

'Instant Family' director on why laughter is key to the adoption process

Mark Wahlberg and Rose Byrne star in "Instant Family."

Sean Anders talks about his new comedy and working with Mark Wahlberg.

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

The process of adopting children can sometimes be long, frustrating and filled with tears. But there's also a lot of love and laughter.

Sean Anders wanted to showcase all aspects of foster-care adoption in an authentic way with his new film "Instant Family." The comedy is a personal project for the director, as much of the story is based on his own experiences with adopting children. "Instant Family" stars Mark Wahlberg and Rose Byrne as a married couple who end up taking in three siblings — including a fiery teenager played by Isabela Moner — and are forced to deal with all the trials and tribulations, as well as the joys, of becoming parents. We caught up with Anders to chat about the film, working with Wahlberg and why laughter is key to the adoption process.

Because adoption can be such a serious topic at times, were you worried or nervous at all about taking a comedic tone with the film?

I wasn't nervous about it because people who are on the inside of it know how much we all laugh together. Any time you talk to families about this, if they go to these support groups, most of the support group time is spent laughing — sometimes laughing because of pretty difficult situations. I was worried that people were going to think without seeing the movie that somehow we're having a laugh at kids who grow up in care. I would never do that. These are my kids. We do have many laughs at the expense of the awkward situations that this creates, but never at the expense of the kids or the system itself.

Why is it important for parents of adopted children to have a sense of humor?

If you're super serious about it, you're not going to last very long. I think it's really important with the kids, too. Kids, they really draft off of their parents' emotions. When you're becoming their parents, if you're just constantly creating all this dramatic weight on everything that's happening, they're going to feel that weight. But if you can be lighter about it and just be like, "Hey, we're in this quirky, bizarre situation, but we're in it together and it's a little crazy and it's a little funny and now let's get to soccer practice." I always think of it like when you're on an airplane and it gets bumpy. You look at the flight attendant. If they look worried, then you're in trouble.

What's the biggest misconception when it comes to the adoption process?
I don't think that anybody has this specific idea in their mind of what a "foster kid" is. But when they hear about kids from foster care, the system, all of that stuff, understandably in brings to mind all of these very negative, scary connotations. For me on the outside of it, I was scared to get in. I was scared about who these kids were going to be. And then I had this revelation that Tom Segura has in the movie, which is when I first started to see a bunch of these kids, you just go, "Oh, they're just kids." I think the biggest misconception is that these kids are somehow this other thing, when really they're just kids. Yeah, some of them come from very troubled pasts, some of them have a lot of their own trauma to work out, but so do most of us.

The film is an amalgamation of stories from several families, but how much of it is grounded in your experiences?
A lot of it, particularly the setup of the movie. This is something that a lot of people have questioned, whether this is real. And it is. I started my family because my wife and I were trying to decide whether or not we were going to have kids, and I made that joke that Mark makes in the movie. I just said, "I feel like I'm getting to be an older guy. Why don't we just adopt a five-year-old? It'll be like I got started five years ago." I meant it completely as a joke. My wife ran with it and it led us to a website, to an orientation. So that's very real.

Mark basically plays a version of you in the film. Why did he feel like the right person for the role?
I think the thing that I have in common with Mark is that Mark, for a movie star, is an incredibly regular guy. It's one of the things I like about him. I think it's the reason why he is such a big movie star. People can kind of sense, even though he's this super-human, get-up-at-3-a.m. workout guy, in his mind and in his heart he's a very regular dude. I feel like, as a director, I'm not the kind of guy who goes to Hollywood parties and whatever. I'm a pretty regular dad. I wanted somebody who could convey that.

A little something for everyone

The Bourse Food Hall opens Nov. 15.

MOLLY GIVEN
 MollyGiven@metro.us

The Bourse Food Hall located in historic Old City is finally ready to make its debut.

The grand opening ceremony kicks off Nov. 15 at 9 a.m. led by Mayor Jim Kenney and the celebrations extend to Nov. 16.

Initially constructed in 1895, The Bourse has undergone an extraordinary transformation from a commodities exchange center to an artisanal food hall in the city of Philadelphia.

The first 100 guests who dine at The Bourse Food Hall for breakfast (9:15 a.m.), lunch (12 p.m.) and dinner (5 p.m.) on Nov. 15 are in for a treat. Prizes such as "Taste of The Bourse" gift bags, gift cards, treats from vendors and more will be given to those lucky first patrons.

That's not all, attendees at the two-day celebration will also be in the running to win larger prizes, such as tickets to see the Philadelphia Flyers and Philadelphia 76ers. Thursday's celebration will cap off with an Old City Happy Hour from 5-7 p.m. for Old City residents, business owners and employees.

Friday's celebration is officially The Bourse Bonanza; the whole day will be packed full of live entertainment and special guests including SWOOP and the Philadelphia Eagles Cheerleaders. Also look out for a mini Mummers parade with the Quaker

ALL PHOTOS: VISIT FLORIDA

Take a break from the cold in sunny South Florida

Here are some great things to do in West Palm Beach, Delray Beach and Fort Lauderdale.

patrick.king@metro.us

With the holidays just around the corner, now is the perfect time to plan your escape from the bitter cold of the Northeast. With its vibrant restaurant scene, hip nightlife, historic architecture and pristine beaches, South Florida is the perfect destination for you and your family this winter.

West Palm Beach

When you think of glamorous spots to visit in Florida, chances are West Palm Beach comes to mind. The city has been celebrated for both its dedication to keeping the historical charm of its architecture while also pushing the cultural forefront with its exceptional restaurants and trendy art galleries and nightclubs. This strong sense of historical identity and willingness to look to the future is what makes West Palm Beach, and its neighboring cities Delray Beach and Fort Lauderdale, the perfect destinations while traveling to the Sunshine State.

Delray Beach

With more than 300 restaurants, hip art galleries, clothing and antique boutiques, Atlantic Avenue in Delray Beach has everything you could possibly be looking for. Nicknamed "A Village by the Sea," the city's dedication to revitalization has drawn national acclaim, winning the Centennial Medallion Award, which acknowledges the nation's most significant works of landscape architecture. This award places Delray Beach into a very select group of award winners that includes New York's Central Park and San Francisco's Ghirardelli Square.

For a slice of the city's artistic side, the historic Delray Beach Center for the Arts is home to the School of Creative Arts and History, the Crest Theatre, a vintage gymnasium, restored classrooms and an outdoor Entertainment Pavilion that hosts exhibits, theater and various learning opportunities. These buildings were saved from demolition by a coalition of local citizens and have been deemed a National Historic Site and Florida Cultural Institution.

Outside of its amazing downtown and arts scenes, visitors can take advantage of walking tour guides, provided by the Greater Delray Beach Chamber of Commerce, through a number of historical districts. And if a walking guide on land isn't what you're looking for, you can take to the seas for a SCUBA trip 150 yards offshore to explore the 106-year-old submerged ship the S.S. Inchulva. This historic sunken ship rests just 25 feet under the ocean's surface and is a perfect adventure for your inner thrill-seeker.

Fort Lauderdale

Named after the military stronghold built during the second Seminole War along the banks of the New River in 1838, Fort Lauderdale has become one of the most popular resort destinations in all of Florida. Once a lush wilderness, the city's population exploded in the 1920s as the number of residents calling it home tripled in just three short years after the building of roads, the addition of a ferry service and a railway extension.

Now, Fort Lauderdale, and the towns surrounding it making up what is known as the Greater Fort Lauderdale area, attract more than 10 million visitors a year to explore its 300 miles of inland waterways — including the world-famous Everglades — and enjoy its 23 miles of amazing sandy beaches and numerous family-friendly attractions.

Visitors can also enjoy Fort Lauderdale's burgeoning downtown scene with its famous riverfront area, including Las Olas Boulevard, home to some of the best dining, upscale boutique shopping, and sophisticated nightlife options. Along the winding Riverwalk Park you will find some of the city's finest cultural and entertainment centers with the Broward Center for the Performing Arts, the Museum of Discovery and Science, the Fort Lauderdale History Center, and the Museum of Art.

So don't wait, book your trip to sunny South Florida today!

SPORTS

Ranking the top teams in the NFL as we inch closer to Thanksgiving.

LUKE MILLER
sports@metro.us

1. New Orleans Saints (8-1) Def. Cincinnati 51-14. Last Week: 1
Drew Brees threw for three first-half touchdowns, exactly what he needed to pass Brett Favre and move into second place on the career touchdown list. He even ran for a score in the Saints' romp over the Bengals. We might not see Brees move past Peyton Manning this season as he needs 30 more scores. But then again, with the way this offense is playing ...

2. Los Angeles Rams (9-1) Def. Seattle 36-31. Last Week: 2
After a week filled with tragedy and fire, the Rams scored a late winner to ensure they wouldn't start their first losing streak of Sean McVay's career. They completed the season sweep over Seattle at the same time. The defense redeemed itself with a late forced fumble on a day where they allowed 273 rushing yards to Seattle. The Rams' run defense is looking increasingly like their only weakness.

3. Kansas City Chiefs (9-1) Def. Arizona 26-14. Last Week: 4
Sunday saw the lowest-scoring output yet for the Chiefs this season. But it also saw Patrick Mahomes set the franchise record for passing touchdowns in a season with his 31st scoring strike. In his first year as the Kansas City signal caller, it only took Mahomes 10 games to break a mark set in 1964 by Hall of Famer Len Dawson. Not a bad start to his career for a franchise that notably struggles finding home-grown quarterbacks.

4. Pittsburgh Steelers (6-2-1) Def. Carolina 52-21. Last Week: 5
Ben Roethlisberger threw a touchdown once every five passes

Thursday night, finishing with five touchdowns, just three incompletions, and a perfect 158.3 quarterback rating. Since opening the season with six interceptions in his first five games, Roethlisberger has just one in the past four, all Steeler victories.

5. New England Patriots (7-3) Lost to Tennessee 34-10. Last Week: 3
The Patriots lost for the first time since Week 3, but their performance was pretty similar to those early-season stumbles: three sacks of Tom Brady, just 40 yards on the ground compared to 150 for their opponents, and a brutal 3-for-15 statline on third down. This time around, however, there are six really impressive wins stacked between the two games, and an appetizing matchup with the Jets to set things right.

6. Los Angeles Chargers (7-2) Def. Oakland 20-6. Last Week: 6
For so many seasons, the Chargers would turn out hard-luck losers in close contests against good teams. Their seasons would be full of impressive performances but short on wins. This year's team is something different, after their sixth win in a row. They survived a rough opening quarter in Oakland before pouring it on against the team with the NFL's worst record.

7. Houston Texans (6-3) Bye. Last Week: 8
The Texans get back to work in Week 11 in a matchup of six-win teams against Washington. Houston has won six straight, but their slow start to the season has them up by just one game over the Titans and another over the similarly hot Colts.

The Phillies could be trading Carlos Santana this offseason after just one season in Philadelphia. GETTY IMAGES

Phillies shopping Carlos Santana

After signing a three-year, $60 million deal with the Philadelphia Phillies last year in free agency; it appears that first baseman Carlos Santana could be on the move this offseason.

Ken Rosenthal of The Athletic wrote in his latest column that the Phillies are "shopping the hell" out of Santana per a rival executive. It does not come as a surprise to see this rumor floating out there about the veteran first baseman.

Santana had an average first season in Philadelphia hitting .229/.352/.414 to go along with 24 home runs and 86 RBI. Outside of the pedestrian offense, he also blocked Rhys Hoskins from returning to first base full-time.

This season, the Phillies experimented with the 25-year-old Hoskins playing in the outfield, which was not a complete failure. But Hoskins is a supremely better infielder than outfielder. Also not to mention, the Phillies have their eyes on free agent superstar outfielder Bryce Harper.

Therefore, the Philadelphia might be better off moving the 32-year-old Santana to another team. But the question then would be who is willing to take an older infielder with still $35 million left on his contract?

That is a tough question to answer. If the Phillies cannot move Santana this offseason, then he could end up being the team's starting third baseman in 2019.

Late in the season, manager Gabe Kapler made a surprising change in the defensive alignment, moving Rhys Hoskins back to his natural position at first baseman and putting Santana at third base.

Santana played 19 games at third base and had a .974 fielding percentage in 119 innings. Despite a small sample size, his fielding percentage was better than the league average (.958).

When asked about the idea of moving to third base full-time in 2019, Santana did not turn it down.

"I'd be open to it," he said (h/t Jim Salisbury of NBC Sports Philly). "I'm prepared for any situation. All I care about is being in the lineup every day. It doesn't matter if I'm at first or third."

With Santana holding his own at the hot corner, it made Maikel Franco solely a bench player. Speaking of Franco, his name has also been brought up in trade rumors this offseason. The San Diego Padres have reportedly expressed interest in the young third baseman.

Consequently, if Franco is moved, then it opens up third base for Santana. One would think that GM Matt Klentak would be more open to doing that because Santana is statistically better defensively and offensively than Franco. Also, Franco will not become a free agent until 2022, meaning he is arbitration eligible beginning in 2019.

It will be interesting to see how this offseason pans out for the Phillies. They obviously have their eyes on the big prize in Harper and if they can get him, it may trigger other moves in the process.

Sixers kicking tires on 'Melo

All signs are pointing to Carmelo Anthony eventually being released by the Rockets.JOVAN ALFORD jovan.alford@metro.usThrough 10 games this season, it has become very clear that the Carmelo Anthony-Houston Rockets experiment is a failed exploration.The 34-year-old Anthony looks like a shell of himself in Houston, which does not come as a surprise, especially with how he played last season in Oklahoma City.This season, Anthony is only averaging 13.4 points and 5.4 rebounds in a career-low 29.2 minutes per game. He is also shooting an abysmal 40.8 percent from the field, 32.8 percent from three-point range and 68 percent from the charity stripe.

Last weekend, Marc

Carmelo Anthony is not having a great season with the Rockets, but could be a potential option for the Sixers. GETTY IMAGESStein of The New York Times reported that Anthony was informed that his short stint with the Rockets will be ending soon.When Anthony ultimately becomes a free agent, there is a high possibility that he might not have a lot of suitors. However, his representatives reportedly spent Monday gathering information on potential landing spots per ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski.It will be interesting to see which teams make Anthony's final list, but hemight already have one team considering signing him.Earlier this week, Chris Sheridan of Get More Sports reported that the Sixers are interested in signing the veteran to play power forward. This rumor does not come as a surprise as Philly has a sizable hole at power forward due to the acquisition of Jimmy Butler from the Minnesota Timberwolves.In that blockbuster deal, the Sixers traded both forwards Robert Covington and Dario Saric,along with guard Jerryd Bayless and a 2022 second-round pick to Minnesota.With Saric not on the team anymore, Philly will have to lean on a combination of Mike Muscala, Wilson Chandler and Jonah Bolden going forward.However, if the Sixers opt to sign him, Anthony would provide some offensive production to offset what they lost with Saric.But that might also be a stretch, especially when you compare Anthony's advanced stats from this season with last season.In 10 games with the Rockets, Anthony has an offensive rating (ORTg) of 103, which is well below his career average of 108. Last season with the Thunder, his ORtg was 104.He has a defensive rating (DRTg) of 113, which is above his career average (108) and what he did in Oklahoma City (109).Anthony's lack of defense has been well-documented over his long career.

Ever wonder how you can help your child develop healthy habits?

Researchers at Temple University are conducting a research study to learn more about how improving children's sleep and other health behaviors affects their weight status and overall health.

To be eligible your child must:
Be 8 – 11 years old
Sleep 9.5 hours or less each night

All families will learn how to improve their child's sleep. Some families will also learn strategies for improving eating and activity behaviors. Families who are eligible and enroll in the study will be compensated for their time.

Please call 215-707-5782 to see if you and your child qualify for our study.

ARE YOU HIV+? ARE YOU A CIGARETTE SMOKER?

The University of Pennsylvania is seeking volunteers, between the ages of 18 and 65, to participate in smoking behavior research.

Eligible participants will receive compensation for time and travel.

Please call (215) 746-8431
to find out more and to see if you are eligible for one of our studies.

WORRIED ABOUT HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE?

LEGAL NOTICES

City of Philadelphia Public Hearing Notice

The Committee on Public Safety of the Council of the City of Philadelphia will hold a Public Hearing on Tuesday, November 20, 2018, at 10:00 AM, in Room 400, City Hall, to hear testimony on the following items:

- 180741 An Ordinance amending Section 10-840 of The Philadelphia Code, entitled "Criminal and Defiant Trespassers," to clarify and modify applicable definitions, penalties, and procedures, and to make certain technical changes, all under certain terms and conditions.
- 180978 An Ordinance amending Title 10 of The Philadelphia Code, entitled "Regulation of Individual Conduct and Activity," Chapter 10-800, "Safety," by adding a new Section 10-841, "Fraudulent Leasing of Residential Property," prohibiting conduct related to the fraudulent leasing of residential property, all under certain terms and conditions.

Immediately following the public hearing, a meeting of the Committee on Public Safety, open to the public, will be held to consider the action to be taken on the above listed items.

Copies of the foregoing items are available in the Office of the Chief Clerk of the Council, Room 402, City Hall.

Michael Decker
Chief Clerk
